Verona 2014

What it is

UniVerSe - University of Verona Search - (<http://universe.univr.it>) is a one-stop solution for the discovery and delivery of local (OPAC) and remote resources, such as books, journal articles, and digital objects.

Through a single search box, users can now search across the full breadth of content from the library's collection, exploring the library's locally-managed collections, along with digital resources such as e-books, e-journals, audio books, videos, etc. It presents the results in a single, relevant-ranked list from which users can access items of interest.

Search

You can search very easily in UniVerSe, just type one or more words you are looking for and click the Search button. The search can access the library's remote collections with the same ease and speed as local, institutional resources. You are also able to make your query both in the OPAC and in the digitalized resources (subscribed or free but selected) or to choose just one of the two. The results are displayed in a list that can be refined by using the facets (by resource type, author, date topic, language, etc.). Additional bibliographical items can be found in a huge index by flagging the Expand beyond library collections.

Document retrieval

You can access digitized resources and the full text of articles and books when available and authorized; you can see information about an item's availability displayed in the search results.

N.B.: to access the online subscribed resources you must be in the Intranet or use the WebVPN service (<https://vpn.univr.it>) which allows you safe access to the University Intranet and all internal IT services from any part of the world as if you were actually in the University.
